

Let's take a look at where to locate important dates you need to be aware of during the semester.

First you will need to open up a web browser and navigate to www.daytonastate.edu.

Then you're going to scroll to the bottom left hand corner to locate the Academic Calendars. Debating on the semester you are interested in would determine which one select.

We're going to select Fall 2016.

Once that page loads it will provide you with the important dates you need to know during the semester.

Knowing how to understand this information is key. First you will locate what it is you are trying to find out. Then you will look at the semester your class is being offered. It is important to know debating on when your classes is it could change what the dates are that are listed.

There are three important dates to be aware of. First is when your classes begin. Second is the last day to add, drop, or adjust your schedule. This is important because this is the last day that you are able to change your classes. Third is the last day to withdraw from classes.

If you are ever curious about holidays, deadlines, or when classes start/end, the academic calendars are the place to find them.
